Chief Patron Message

“AICNU - 2019 - Nurturing Excellence in Clinical Nutrition Practice”

At the outset, I would extend my commendations to the AICNU organizing committee for their relentless perseverance in facilitating a robust platform in the region to keep raising the bar in clinical nutrition. I do also thank the entire faculty and commend the 500+ delegates from India and neighbouring countries for their participation in AICNU 2019, which underscores commitment to keep learning from stalwarts and share insights with peers.

In the interdisciplinary field of clinical nutrition, it is critical that professionals stay abreast of the ever-growing changes in the field to understand emerging standards, current research and regulations and maintain the highest level of competence, so that every patient receives optimal nutrition support. So, in keeping with ethos, the 11th edition of AICNU has a very pertinent theme of nurturing excellence and it would assist Clinical Dietitians and Nutritionists develop as leaders and collaborators.

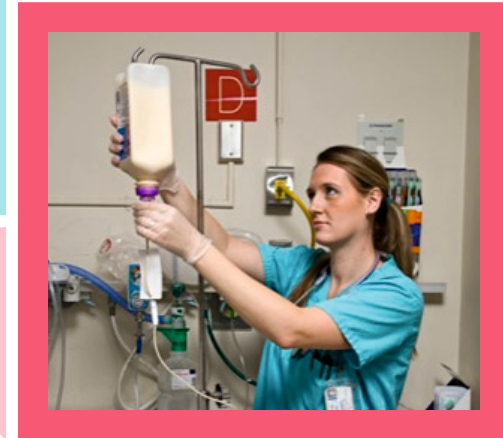

Personally, I am greatly anxious about the growing prevalence of Non Communicable Diseases (NCDs), which are the leading cause of preventable deaths in India and world over. Poor nutrition and unhealthy diets being key risk factors of NCDs. I am hopeful that new ideas and innovations will emerge from this forum, as they would be invaluable in our collective war against NCDs.

Above all, AICNU stands for powerful collaboration and the goal of this two-day conference is to equip all with the new acumen. Better nutrition fuels healthier societies; together we can build a brighter tomorrow.

With best personal regards,
